Internet boasts of sex, drink and violence as youngsters hit 18

ANNIVERSARY SHAME OF DUNBLANE SURVIVORS

SCOTTISH EXCLUSIVE

By Paula Murray

DUNBLANE survivors have "shamed" the memory of their dead peers with foul-mouthed boasts about sex, brawls and drink-fuelled antics as they reach adulthood.

A number of the youngsters, now 18, have posted shocking blogs and photographs of themselves on the Internet, 13 years after being sheltered from public view in the aftermath of the atrocity.

Sixteen pupils and their teacher died when gunman Thomas Hamilton burst into the gym at Dunblane Primary School and opened fire on March 13, 1996.

In the days and months that followed the survivors, CONTINUED ON PAGE 7
